

Abstract

Finite response filters (FIRs) are divided into partial filters that filter a same portion of image data to generate partial filtered results. The partial filtered results may be saved and later retrieved to generate complete filter outputs.